DAWN GRAVES / THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

The traveling art display is comprised of 19 two-dimensional artworks and six three-dimensional works.

Dix teen promotes suicide awareness at Out of the Darkness Walk in Sidney aje Vanbenberg has walked miles in the shoes of those contemplating suicide. A senior at Potter-Dix High School, Vanbenberg attempted suicide last fall. This weekend, he'll walk a 5K with others to help prevent suicide and bring awareness to the problem.

FOR THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

Following the attempt, he was court-ordered to attend a rehabilitation clinic in Omaha that helped him turn his life around. At the clinic, Vanbenberg said he learned about the Out of the Darkness Walk, and funds for the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. Part of his therapy is to help yourself by helping others, so the teen decided it was time, then and there, to "pay it forward."

The Out of the Darkness Walk begins at 5 p.m. Sunday at the Elk's Lodge at 1040 Jackson Street.

Registration begins at 2 p.m., and there is no cost to participate. T-shirts will be available for purchase as a fundraiser for suicide prevention research.

GAJE VANBENBERG

Vanbenberg, 17, said he knew he had a mental illness as a pre-teen. He selfmedicated with drugs and alcohol to combat his depression, eventually overdosing on drugs as part of his attempt to end his suffering.

"I'd witnessed a guy shoot himself," Vanbenberg said. "I thought I could deal with things for a while with drugs and alcohol, but I couldn't." Vanbenberg said he learned at the rehab center of things he could do in place of alcohol, drugs, cutting and other self-harming techniques to distract himself from thoughts of suicide. Often, it's a heat of the moment decision, he said and distractions are a way to cope with the (immediate) problem until you're able to deal with it rationally.

Now, the youth surrounds himself with supportive friends and family who help deal with his problems and support his efforts to help others. Those friends and family are his planning committee for this weekend's walk.

As an entrepreneur, an accomplished artist, a published illustrator and recipient of multiple awards for various accomplishments, one might presume that Nelson was snobbish and egotistical.

In fact, he's a humble, soft-spoken young man, grateful for the opportunities in life.

Home-schooled by his mother, Ellen, since the eighth grade, Ethan is now a high school senior. He gives a lot of credit to his parents for their support.

"They definitely encouraged me to do things," he said, "do things beyond my

His efforts qualified him to be a Questbridge College Prep Scholar.

He considers his time at WNCC to have been very beneficial, especially as it prepared him for the summer classes he just completed at Harvard.

"All the professors there are just really motivated and really want to help the students out and get them jobs, get them internships," Nelson said. "It's just a really great place to go to college."

Nelson's college experience has provided him with other opportunities he may not have had otherwise.

an effort to raise awareness

M. TIMOTHY NOLTING FOR THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

n Sept. 7, 1869, a telegrapher in Utah received what was most likely the newsflash of the day: "Powell's three men killed by three Shebits ... Indian report that they were found in an exhausted state, fed by the She-bits and put on the trail leading to Washington after which they saw a squaw gathering seed and shot her. Whereupon the She-bits followed up and killed all three."

The three dead men were Oramel G. Howland, 36; his younger brother, Seneca B. Howland, 26; and William H. Dunn, a companion of unknown age. The three men had been part of the 1869 Colorado River expedition of Major John Wesley Powell. The three had been with the expedition from the start when in late May, Major Powell and his nine, hand-picked men launched their boats at

Deserters or Outcasts: Three who left (Part I)

Green River Station, Wyoming Territory, with the purpose of exploring the Colorado River and the uncharted canyons where it

The three-month expedition was one of discovery, hardship and danger. Of the 10 who began the expedition, only six would complete the journey from its Green River beginnings to the emergence from the towering walls of the Grand Canyon's western end.

Some claim it was cowardice that prompted the Howland brothers and Dunn to leave the expedition, climb out of the canyon and attempt to return to the settlements on dry land. The reward for their cowardice was murder at the hands of the desert tribe of She-bits" - more commonly referred to as Shivwits. Others, including some of the members of the expedition, have described the departure of the three as a peaceful mutiny due in part to Major Powell's dislike for Dunn and the sometimes irrational behavior of the Major's brother, Captain Walter Powell.

It is interesting to note the backgrounds of the 10 men who comprised the expedition's crew. Six were veterans of the Civil War, three of them being officers and the other four were independent, free roaming adventurers who were quite likely unaccustomed to taking orders from any-

The leader, Major John Wesley Powell, had gained his rank during the Civil War. He had been severely wounded in the Battle of Shilo, and as a result, had lost his right arm.

Jack C. Sumner, a Civil War soldier and mountain man, had established a small trading post at Hot Sulphur Springs in Middle Park, Colorado Territory. It was at Sumner's camp that Powell met Dunn, the Howland brothers and W. R. "Bill" Hawkins.

The older of the Howland's, O. G. (Oramel), was a valued addition to the expedition. Oramel was interested in science and a good writer. He had been a printer at the "Rocky Mountain News," vice president of the Denver Typographical Union as well as an agent for the Methodist Episcopal publication. The younger of the brothers, Seneca, was also a Civil War veteran and had been wounded at Gettysburg. Seneca seemed to follow his older brother's lead and although a competent member of the team, was the "quiet one" of the group. Very little is known of Dunn. At the time, he was making a living by hunting and trapping in the Rock Mountains. Perhaps a bit of a loner, he was nevertheless a hardworking and tireless crewmember quick to action and fearless. Most of those with the expedition suspected that he was a fugitive.

Bill Hawkins was a cook and boasted of the best, brewed coffee west of the Mississippi. He also was a veteran of the Civil War.

Walter H. Powell was Major Powell's brother. Known as "Cap," Walter had been a captain during the Civil War and records of his actions indicate some psychological disorder as a result, perhaps similar to the "shell shock" that soldiers from WWI often suffered.

Rounding out the crew was George Y. Bradley, a lieutenant during the war, Frank Goodman, an English adventurer who was anxious to be a part of such a grand expedition and finally, Andrew Hall, a 19-year-old Scotsman who had come to the great west to be a mountain man.

The Expedition consisted of these 10 men and four specially designed boats that were delivered from their eastern manufacturers by the Union Pacific railroad. One of the four boats, the "Emma Dean" was Major Powell's personal craft. The other three, "Kitty Clyde's Sister," "No Name" and "Maid of the Canyon" each held one-third of the expeditions scientific equipment, tools, supplies and provisions.

Perhaps a certain amount of animosity between Major Powell and Oramel Howland began soon after the expedition was underway. Less than two weeks into the voyage, Oramel failed to notice Major Powell's orders to bring all boats to shore.

As a result, Oramel's craft, the "No Name" drifted past the intended landing point and was swept into a series of rapids that the crew was unprepared for. The boat capsized, throwing the Howland brothers and Frank Goodman into the river. The boat was destroyed causing the loss of one-third of their food supply, half of their mess that included utensils, weapons and other supplies as well as several pieces of scientific instruments.

That night, George Bradley wrote in his per-

Day funds.

Later on, toward the end of the expedition, Oramel also lost most of the maps and scientific notes that he had been taking throughout the trip. This loss was a significant factor that prevented Major Powell from producing much scientific data from the 1896 expedition.

The following day, after the loss of the "No Name," Powell ordered the men to recover what they could from the wreckage. Sumner and Dunn took the smaller craft, (Powell's personal boat, the "Emma Dean") and conducted a salvage operation. The two were able to retrieve several barometers and thermometers, a three-gallon keg of whiskey and three bags of flour. However, there was no room in the remaining three boats for the flour and Major Powell ordered it to be left behind.

At this spot the adventures discovered the wreckage of another craft that was assumed to be the remains of the failed William Henry Ashley expedition of 1825. Powell named the devastating series of rapids, Disaster Falls.

Navigating the many rapids often resulted in lost equipment, damaged craft and broken oars. New oars had to be handmade from driftwood that had accumulated along the banks of the river. On July 11, after navigating a series of treacherous rapids Sumner wrote in his journal, "broke many oars, and most of the Ten Commandments."

Some dissention among the crew was the result of Major Powell's frequent time consuming excursions away from the main course of the river. On July 26, George Bradley wrote, "another day wasted foolishly," when he recorded that Major Powell wanted to climb the mountains above one of the many side canyons. One such excursion placed Major Powell and George Bradley in a perilous situation – one that could have cost Powell his life and may have ended the expedition.

Major Powell recorded the nearly disastrous event in his personal account of the expedition: "... by making a spring, I gain a foothold in a little crevice and grasp an angle of the rock overhead. I find I can get up no farther and cannot step back, for I dare not let go with my hand, and cannot reach foothold below without. I call to Bradley for help. He finds a way by which he can get to the top of the rock over my head, but cannot reach me. Then

100 YEARS AGO Sept. 12, 1914 'Auto Hit By Train - Mrs. C. L. Jones Killed'

Thursday at 10:00 o'clock a terrible accident occurred at the private crossing four miles east of town, leading out from the St. George Ranch. C. L. Jones and wife were starting for town in their little run-a-bout when their engine died exactly upon the crossing. A freight train of sixty fruit cars was approaching and being a heavy train and going down grade it was impossible to stop the train although emergency brakes were applied. The engine hit the auto, throwing Mrs. Jones upon the pilot, killing her instantly, and throwing Mr. Jones in the air above the smoke stack. He came down thirty feet distant, his hands plowing in the soft dirt and probably saving him from fatal injury. He was badly bruised and shocked and could not talk coherently for some hours and even now cannot recall details of the fatal start. Word was speedily got to Sidney and many hastened to the home.

Coroner J.J. Parks impaneled a jury who viewed the body and took the testimony of the only witnesses. Engineer Roach testified that he saw the auto enter the right of way at a slow speed and thought it was going to stop and even at that rate it could have passed away safely had the engine not died on the tracks. He saw Mrs. Jones stand up as though to get out and though the emergency brake had been immediately resorted to when the auto was seen to stop, the heavy train could not be brought to a standstill in time. All evidence was practically the same. The jury exonerated all concerned by its verdict that the death of Mrs. Jones was purely accidental.

75 Years Ago Sept. 5, 1939 'No Danger Of Navy Band Not Appearing'

The United States navy band will fulfill its engagement here October 11, regardless of the trend of the international situation, the chamber of commerce has been informed by Wayne Borton, tour manager.

Arrangements for appearance of the band may be carried out, without the fear that the tour will be cancelled, Borton said in a letter received Friday.

The chamber of commerce was planning to spend in the neighborhood of $300 for advertising and promotion and was hesitant to incur the expense if there was a possibility that the tour might be called off.

Tickets will go on sale next week in most of the principal towns in western Nebraska and northeastern Colorado. All seats will be reserved and will be sold on a "first come, first served" basis, it was announced.

50 YEARS AGO Sept. 4, 1964 'Damage High In Wednesday Wreck'

A Wednesday morning accident at the intersection of 13th and Illinois resulted in heavy damage to two outof-town vehicles.

A pickup driven by Leonard Russell, 49, of Potter was going north on 13th when it attempted to make a left turn onto Illinois. In doing so, it struck a 1964 station wagon, driven by Thomas B. Supples, 27, of Littleton, Colo., which was headed south on 13th.

'Damage High In Wednesday Wreck'

Damage to the Supples' car amounted to $491.34. The Russell pickup was damaged to the extent of $100.

No damage estimates were available on two accidents which occurred within eight minutes of each other Thursday morning.

At 8:48 a.m. at the corner of 20th and Illinois, a car driven by Allen A. Baack, 17, of Route 1, had stopped for a car in front of it when it was struck in the rear by a car driven by Paul A. Hutchinson, also 17. Both drivers were headed east at the time of the mishap.

Eight minutes later and a block down the street, a car driven by Martin F. Schwartz, 82, of Route 1, Sidney, was headed east in the right lane of Illinois when it was struck in the left side by a car driven by Thekla Mueller, 64, of 1723 Maple, which was pulling from the driveway at Safeway.

No injuries were incurred in any of the accidents.

25 YEARS AGO Sept. 5, 1989 'July May Be The Month In Which The Year Long Drought Was Broken!'

August may well go into the books as the month the drought ended in Cheyenne County.

The High Plains Ag Lab recorded 3.76 inches of precipitation, bringing the total for 1989 to 9.88 Inches. It was the wettest month at the Ag lab since May, 1988, when 6.00 inches was recorded.

The Ag Lab received precipitation nine days last month with 1.65 inches recorded Aug. 12and .76 on Aug. 13.

Those were the two wettest days of the month. Despite the rain, moisture totals are still far behind average. Through eight months of 1988, the Ag Lab recorded 14.42 inches and in 1987, the eight month total was 14.56 inches.

However in 1985, after the first eight months the year, the Ag Lab had recorded just 9.03 inches. After July being possibly the hottest month in recorded history in this area, temperatures last month were below normal.

Median high at the Ag Lab was 84.1 degree's and median low was 54.3 degree's. That's the second coolest, August in the last five years. Only August, of 1987, was cooler, a medium high of 82.9 and the median low of 49.0. High reading last month was 99 on Aug. 4, Low was 48 on Aug. 8.

South Dakota offers tax benefit for historic sites

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — South Dakota's historical society is reminding residents to apply for property tax benefits for historic

The historical society says Nov. 3 is the deadline to apply for the state's eight-year tax moratorium for restoration and rehabilitation work that happened in 2014. Society director Jay Vogt says an eight-year delay is placed on property tax assessments for historic buildings that qualify.

The benefit is available for buildings listed on the National or State Register of Historic Places. The society approved 18 properties across the state for the program last year. Vogt says the 18 projects represented over $7.5 million in private investments in historic buildings.

Editorial round-up:

Immigration, obesity and tax reform

Kearney Hub

he problem with U.S. immigration policy is that it makes legal entry into the country so expensive, timeconsuming and risky that instead of entering through the front door, foreigners are sneaking in through the back door — ille-

For whatever reason, U.S. lawmakers cannot recognize this fact. They know there is an abundance of low-skill jobs Americans are unwilling to perform that is a magnet for illegal immigrants, but ignorance and prejudice seem to guide policy from that point. For example, many of the jobs that lure illegal immigrants are year-round, such as packing plant jobs, but our current policy provides only for seasonal workers to enter legally.

Why do we ignore the year-round needs? Another often ignored fact is that many young people come here from foreign lands to study math, science and engineering. They prepare for careers as scientists, researchers and engineers, but our immigration policy is slanted against them. They must first obtain visas and then hope that good fortune might hand them the opportunity to eventually become citizens.

But why wait for the United States when other nations, including Canada and Germany, allow easy legal entry for highly skilled and educated foreigners?

Why do we educate foreign students, but then sustain a policy that shoos them away to competing industrial nations?

Ignoring the need for scientists, researchers and engineers as well as for year-round laborers is a fatal economic mistake. Resolving those problems and others is in the interests of our nation, yet federal lawmakers are doing nothing. Why? If logic isn't guiding their actions, then something else is. Could it be prejudice?

There's a third fact that lawmakers standing in the way of reform don't seem to grasp, and that is the likelihood that all of those foreigners they chose to deny could eventually become legal, despite the legislative obstructions.

One avenue is through executive action. President Obama exercised his powers in 2012 by granting temporary legal status to children brought into the country illegally by their parents.

Some observers believe that in a few weeks Obama will issue yet another executive order that will legalize up to 4 million illegal aliens.

Only Congress can grant a path to citizenship and the right to vote, so obstructionists might not face immediate peril at the polls. However, U.S. demographics are constantly shifting and gradually, many congressional districts are losing their white majority. How soon will it be before the diverse blend of voters that results will turn against the obstructionists?

Lincoln Journal Star

he awarding of an $11.3 million grant for a center to study obesity at the molecular level shows the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is continuing its aggressive push to boost research.

Obesity, which affects about one-third of Americans, is one of the most serious health problems facing the country.

Janos Zempleni, director of the center, said the long-term goal is for it to become a leader in nutrient signaling, which explores how nutrients initiate chain reactions that cause cellular responses like fat storage and inflammation.

One of the trendiest topics in obesity research is whether something can be done to boost a person's natural endowment of brown fat cells.

People and animals with a generous supply of the brown fat cells - often found between the shoulder blades - seem to burn more energy than people with fewer of the cells.

Researchers at the UNL center are studying how certain dietary acids activate molecular pathways that turn fat-storing white cells into beige cells, which burn calories, according to a UNL press release on Researchers hope that nutrient signaling can be used to help prevent obesity and related diseases, such as Type 2 diabetes, cardiovascular disease and non-alcoholic fatty liver disease.

"Our center focuses on what we consider consumer-friendly, feasible approaches to improving health and nutrition," Zempleni said. UNL Chancellor Harvey Perlman added, "This is the kind of innovative research that attracts funding and impacts UNL earned the five-year grant from the National Institutes of Health. "The budget environment in (Washington) D.C. is very tough; the competition for resources is very intense and success rates in the United States have reduced in the last five years, noted Prem Paul, UNL's vice chancellor for research and economic development.

Research expenditures at UNL were $253 million in 2012, the last year for which figures are available. UNL's goal is to achieve $300 million in research expenditures by

It's important to note that the grant provides new opportunities for collaboration with the University of Nebraska Medical Center in the areas of nutrition, genetics, biochemistry, food science, immunology and even computer science.

The same can be said of the $10 million NIH grant earned earlier this month by UNO — more than double the largest grant the school had received previously to establish a center for biomechanics research. The funds will be used to develop new treatments for people recovering from movement-affecting disorders.

When cutting-edge research is happening, the energy ripples through the NU system, opening new possibilities for students and, perhaps, the whole world.

The Grand Island Independent

very member of Congress plus President Obama is steadfast in favor of comprehensive tax reform. Everyone wants reform, but for years nothing has been done. The problem is that Democrats and Republicans can't agree on what should be included in "comprehensive."

Now the waters of reform have been further muddied by the introduction of the words "tax inversion" to the public. Taxes paid by corporations are a part of reform, in addition to rules for individuals. And taxes paid by corporations are a big deal, because taxes affect competitiveness in world markets, which further affects corporations' hiring and wage decisions.

Over the last several years, other nations have gradually reduced their corporate tax rates in attempts to lure businesses (and jobs) to their shores. Today the United States finds itself with the highest corporate tax rate in the world, a fact well known to policymakers in Washington.

This fact also hasn't been lost on the managements of corporations. And through a process called inversion, they can merge with businesses headquartered outside the United States and pay some taxes at significantly lower rates than ordinarily would be the case.

This has outraged Democrats and the president, and Republicans aren't happy about it, either. The president is lambasting corporations...continuing a general theme that has been consistent during his two terms in office.

It is not yet clear how the public views this, which isn't surprising. Most taxpayers try to minimize their own taxes by taking advantage of any provisions of the tax code that might favor them. They understand the rules of the game: don't break the law, but don't pay more than required.

The president and Democrats want to try solving the inversion problem with more laws, more regulations, and threats of ret-

WORK DAZE:

Working hard or hardly working?

BOB GOLDMAN

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

utting in long days? Working over the weekend? You probably feel pretty darn proud of yourself.

Well, you can stop. Stop feeling proud of yourself, that is. According to a recent Gallup poll, "half of all full-time workers indicate they typically work more than 40 hours, and nearly four in 10 say they work at least 50 hours."

Putting aside the hardly possible idea that the respondents were lying through their crooked, yellow, dishonest teeth, may I say how nice it is to hear from the nosy parkers at Gallup. I thought Gallup polls were a thing of the past, like fountain Coke, lifelong pensions and annual raises. Why, the last Gallup poll I read testified to the box-office popularity of screen-star Veronica Lake.

But that's hardly the point. The point is that the 40-hour workweek is about as relevant as, well, Veronica Lake. Instead, Americans now have the 47-hour workweek, or maybe, the 50-hour workweek, or, possibly, the 60-hour workweek!

This may be very good news for the American economy, but it is very bad news for someone whose workweek rarely lasts longer than 15 hours.

That's right, friend; I'm talking about

Let's forget what you tell Gallup, or what you tell your boss, either one of whom is likely to ring you up at dinner with questions that make your blood, and your soup, run cold. We both know your usual workday schedule. It starts with an hour of chat, followed by an hour of "Angry Birds," and winds up with an hour of semi-productive work. After which comes two hours of lunch, one hour of nap, and one more hour of absolutely fierce work time, during which you make up excuses for all the work you didn't do that day, after which you are so exhausted that you leave an hour early.

Do the math and see what you get. The way I count it, you're putting in a blazing 15 hours. [Of course, that doesn't include vacations, off-site meetings and all the faux sick days you can pack into a year.]

In a 40-hour world, it has been possible to maintain your slacker life style, but now that Gallup has spilled the beans, it may be more difficult for you to keep your job.

And, let's face it — when no one is paying you to do something, what's the fun of goof-

The polling people didn't cover this criti-ribution. Republicans counter that the most effective way to solve the problem is to simply lower the corporate tax rate. The result is another Washington impasse.

Our own view is that corporate tax rates in the United States should be lowered so that we are more competitive in the world economy. We need to do all we can to make it easier for businesses to expand and cal issue, so I guess it's up to me.

One idea is to ask your boss to start paying you on an hourly basis. As the survey shows, salaried workers put in more hours than hourly workers. Why? Because "hourly workers can be restricted in the amount > they work by employers who don't need or can't afford to pay overtime."

I realize this strategy has risks. Your company would have to put in a time clock, and you would have to punch in and out. Eventually, even a dim-bulb manager like yours would realize that you are working two hours a day. Even worse, you would be paid only for two hours a day. But this might not be so bad. All you have to do is get your company to set your hourly rate at, say, $2,000 an hour. That adds up to $30,000 a week, or $1.56 million a year. Definitely, a nice bump for you, but for a bank executive, chump change. And even at 15 hours a week, you do a lot more work, a lot less damage, than a bank execu-

If management will not agree to a $2,000an-hour wage, there is another course of action. Simply have the HR department redefine your job duties, so you get credit for all the time you spend helping the company

Of course, you will need to explain that even though you are not being productive in the typical, narrow-minded, profit-and-loss way of calculating employee productivity, the fact you dress so well and look so good significantly improves the company's image, even when you are crumpled in your chair, snoring, while taking your apras-lunch nap. You also boost worker morale. That's right! By your refusal to do anything at the office but nap, chat and play games, you make your co-workers feel good about their productivity, which encourages them to work those 47-hour weeks.

The bottom line — don't sit there doing nothing. Go see your supervisor and demand a shorter workweek and a big fat raise.

Tell them Gallup sent you.

hire. To offset fears of lower tax revenue, Republicans and Democrats should also agree on which corporate tax loopholes make the least sense, and eliminate them.

This is a fairly simple solution. Washington loves to make things complex, however. That way, some politicians can continue to bloviate about tax reform, rather than enact it.

Jewish man - born in Bethlehem and raised in Nazareth - began the life of an itinerant preacher. He chose 12 men to assist him in this work and many others chose to follow him. He preached repentance for sin and claimed to be the Son of God who had come to call sinners into a renewed unity with their Creator.

During his lifetime and in the years following his death, his followers preached his message in the then-known parts of the world, which we now call the Middle East. They went from Jerusalem where their leader had been crucified and buried, to Alexandria and other parts of North Africa, to Persia, to Egypt, to Mesopotamia, to Ethiopia, to the Sudan, then called Nubia, and to Syria. In an important city on one of the many caravan and trade routes called Antioch, these followers of Jesus of Nazareth were first called Christians.

When Christianity was legalized at about the beginning of the fourth century many of these people were able to publicly declare their belief in the teachings of this man. And much of that world became Christian. Even though there were some who held different beliefs about certain aspects of this religion, almost the entire area professed some sort of Christian faith. The church, governed mostly from Constantinople, would hold councils to discuss and argue and settle by consensus what they agreed to be truth. The world of that day was the Greco-Roman Empire and most of that surrounded the Mediterranean Sea. There was one Christian Church and this was the cradle of Christianity.

Europe as we know it today had not quite come into being. It was basically a series of city-states vying for power. Islam had also not yet come upon the scene and would not for several centuries, but it finally arrived. Its followers, by conquest and violence, overran most of the Christian territories, although peace was restored at times and many of those who were conquered, in order to save their lives, adopted the little more than 2,000 years ago, a young Muslim faith, changed their names to Arabic names and served their conquerors. Avicenna and Averoes are examples of this practice.

> Today there is much unrest in this area. Some of the Islamic people whose Holy Writings taught them to respect the "peoples of the Book," i.e., Christians and Jews, have disregarded these teachings. These > > malicious few have assumed great power and in search of even more power and wealth have ignored the teachings of their own faith to attempt to destroy the Holy Shrines of other religions including some offshoot sects of their own faithful.

> > Many Christians, not only Catholic and Orthodox, but Evangelicals and mainline Protestants have fled their homes and their communities and most of these people are Arabs - not Muslims but Arab Christians. The cities of Aleppo and Mosul are prime examples of these. Westerners often are not aware so do not give any thought to the Christians of what was once called the fertile Crescent. They have had to fight for this existence over the centuries and they have defended their faith

Now a new threat has arisen and it may be worse than anyone has experienced. In Europe there has been a steady influx of Arabs. Many of the are fine people; in fact, most Arabic people I have ever met are gracious and kind. But they're not the ones making threats. And among those now populating Europe, there are some who do not fit the mold of gracious and kind.

Recently, a public official reminded us that these militant jihadists are only a plane ticket away. In Europe, these people are pushing for Islamic law to replace the laws of the country where they live. It could also happen here. We must pray that God will allow all people to live in peace and that these malcontents are stopped before they stop us.

After more than a century, beloved church to close

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A San its last service after 117 years this Antonio church known for its inclusiveness is set to close this month.

When a group of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender Catholics was banned from a nearby parish, Beacon Hill Presbyterian Church opened its doors. The neighborhood association, artists and recovery groups also used the space.

But the San Antonio Express-News reports Beacon Hill will hold weekend. Over the years its congregation has dwindled as have the funds for covering the church's operational costs.

Church lay leader Sally Lewis says it's sad that the church will close but the congregation has become too small for the space.

Longtime Beacon Hill congregant Betty Smith likens the church's closure to a death.

Israel's Peres pitches "UN of Religions" to pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Retired Israeli President Shimon Peres has proposed a new global peace initiative to Pope Francis: A "United Nations of Religions." given that most wars today have religious, not nationalistic, undercurrents.

The Vatican said Peres pitched the initiative during a 45-minute audience Thursday in the Apostolic Palace. The two men last met when Francis invited the then-Israeli president and Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas to pray for peace together in the Vatican gardens on June 8.

A few weeks later, war broke out in the Gaza Strip.

Peres told the Catholic publication Famiglia Cristiana that the U.N. is illsuited to handle today's conflicts and that a "'U.N. of Religions' is the best way to fight terrorists who kill in the name of God."

Francis promised the Vatican's attention to the proposal.

Old church bell has new Boise home

BOISE. Idaho (AP) — A Methodist ry of the bell a year ago and discovered church in Boise has returned a bell to a nearby Baptist church after researching the history of the bell that is more than 100 years old.

KTVB-TV reports that members of the Cathedral of the Rockies and the First Baptist Church gathered on Thursday for the occasion.

Cathedral of the Rockies officials say they started researching the histothat sometime before 1900 it was sold from the Baptists to the Methodists.

Cathedral of the Rockies uses chimes and decided to give the bell back in honor of the 150th anniversary of the First Baptist Church.

The large bell had been sitting in front of the Cathedral of the Rockies since 2004, and before that in a garden since 1959.

District.

According to Congressman Adrian Smith's press release, the nationwide competition is "designed to promote innovation and engagement in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) among high school students."

"I submitted my little game," Nelson said, "and turned out I got first place."

Nelson's app is featured on the U.S. House of Representatives' website, and will be displayed in a U.S. Capitol exhibit. Nelson was recognized by Smith for his accomplishment.

This was not the first time Nelson was recognized by the congressman.

Earlier this year, Nelson was awarded both the Congressional Award Bronze Medal and won second place in the 2014 Third District Congressional Art Competition.

Winning the Congressional Award for Youth Initiative, Service and Achievement is no easy task.

A participant sets goals in four areas: voluntary public service, personal development, physical fitness and expedition/ exploration, and dedicates a certain amount of hours to each activity to progress through different levels. To achieve bronze medal status, for example, Nelson had to complete at least 100 hours of voluntary public service over the course of seven months. Each activity requires the completion of a specific number of hours.

Nelson was able to meet with Smith at his Scottsbluff office to receive his medal.

"That was really exciting, to meet him and get the award," he said. "I was kind of nervous, too."

Another meeting with Smith occurred after Nelson won second place in the Congressional Art contest for his photograph entitled "Aviator," which is a multiple-exposure composition of a pilot's silhouette overlaid with an image of sunlit clouds.

"My mom saw the Congressional Art Contest online, so I submitted this one," Nelson said, pointing to the framed photograph. "I had taken it, I think, a few years earlier. And it turns out that Mr. Smith really likes flying."

The piece now hangs in Smith's office in Washington, D.C.

That contest is just one of many occasions when Nelson has won awards for his art. Other recent awards include Cheyenne County Art Guild Best of Show, the Hixson-Lied Award for Young Artists and Best of Show Youth Division at the Image Art Show.

To top it all off, Nelson has just been chosen as the Chevenne County Art Guild's Artist of the Month for September.

It appears that Nelson could be accepted at his choice of any college after high school, but he hasn't quite made up his mind.

"I'm not completely sure yet," he said, "but I do have a few colleges picked that I'm looking at."

His choice in a college depends on a couple factors.

He would consider a school that is, he says, "well-rounded and has a lot of different programs, a lot of different types of students," as opposed to a college that only specializes in one discipline. He wants to be able to change his mind, if necessary.

Outside of academic pursuits, Nelson is deeply involved in 4-H. He believes it has brought him many opportunities to explore different vocational and avocational pursuits he may not otherwise have had access

"I can't really say enough how 4-H had really prepared me," he said. "It's just such a great program."

One of the benefits of Nelson's involvement with 4-H is the confidence and skills he gained to start his own business, Nelsonart, with his older brother Jake. Nelson markets and sells notecards and prints of their art, and has sometimes used the venture as a fundraiser for worthy recipients, such as the Sidney Public Library.

His notecards caught the attention of Charlotte Endorf, a Nebraska author who happened to be doing a presentation at the library. She asked if Nelson would illustrate her book, "Bless Your Hearts: The North Platte Canteen." About 20 of his illustrations were published in the book.

Nelson promotes entrepreneurship, speaking and presenting to kids at events such as Career Day at WNCC.

"I'll prepare a little presentation and just tell these kids how they can start a business, or get into the business that they want to be in," he said "Like, how to start out, how to get advice, how to promote your ist, a published illustrator and a recipient of multiple awards for various accomplishments - Nelson can claim all these, and more. But he wants kids to know that these opportunities are available to almost

"It's just to show that you can, through these programs, you can go pretty much anywhere that you want, or any career that you want," he said. "You're not just confined to a few careers or this region."

While Nelson isn't sure yet what he will end up doing in life, or exactly which career he will pursue, he does know that he wants to benefit others through it.

"I definitely want to be making a difference and helping people," he said.

he looks around for some stick or limb of a tree, but finds none. Then he suggests that he had better help me with the barometer case; but I fear I cannot hold on to it.

"The moment is critical. Standing on my toes, my muscles begin to tremble. It is 60 or 80 feet to the foot of the precipice. If I lose my hold, I shall fall to the bottom, and then perhaps roll over the bench and tumble still farther down the cliff. At this instant it occurs to Bradley to take off his drawers, which he does, and swings them down to me.

I hug close to the rock, let go with my hand, seize the dangling legs, and, with his assistance, I am enabled to gain the top."

On Friday, the 13th of August, Major Powell wrote in his diary: "We have an unknown distance yet to run, an unknown river to explore. What falls there are we know not; what rocks beset the channel, we know not; what walls rise over the river, we know not. ...the men talk as cheerfully as ever, jests are bandied about ... but to me the cheer is somber the jests are ghastly."

It would appear that the crew is becoming weary.

Venus Gets Serious

Venus had a breezy time in Leo, exaggerating all of her assets and playing up the flirtation — she was all big hair and glittery eyelashes in that part of the zodiac. Now she's wondering, "Who's going to take out the trash?" Love is as love does. And right now, what love does is take out the trash.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). What others see as a problem you see as a perfect chance to work out your skills. Determine what you need to do in order to attain the lifestyle or attractive quality you desire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You may be joking, but you're no joker. You lighten the atmosphere when it's necessary and when it leads to effective action. There is wisdom in your kidding and witty observation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Avoid the people with limited vision who feel compelled to lead those who have absolutely none. "In the land of the blind, a one-eyed man is king.'

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Don't be so surprised that you're changing. Accept it. Animals evolve and adapt. You're an animal. Bend, morph and twist to make the most of the new circumstances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Accept the bad feeling, and you'll neutralize its power over you. Example: You'll feel worse trying to avoid sadness than you will by agreeing to feel it. It will wash over you in a jiffy. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You belong to your dreams. Let them lead you. The path you have stumbled upon is the right one for you as long as you commit to it. Be the kind of person who gives all to life, and life will give all to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Feel the impulse, and then act on it. Better to ask for pardon than permission. The hierarchy is fictional. Who wants to be the author? You? It only will exist if you agree to it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll be in a social mood and, of course, will gravitate toward the interesting, accomplished and attractive people. The one with the best sense of humor will steal your heart. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

You'll take part in an interesting conversation and provide a sounding board of truth for others as you listen. You can do this silently. Your expressions are quite telling. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The underdog is winning. Someone who is behind catches up — success! You'll support the efforts of another now, and the next time you're behind, you'll be all the more motivated to sprint to the finish. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Does your future self approve of the action your current self is taking? Probably not, but how are you expected to accomplish these feats on vour own? Ask vour future self for guidance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You have done something so creative, unique and worthy of admiration that your resistance to being the center of attention is simply futile. You won't be able to remain invisible, so don't even try.

SATURDAY'S BIRTHDAY (Sept. 6). You'll gain youthful vitality as you interact with a variety of different people. October is about healing a family rift. In November, you'll not only do what's necessary for your own success, but you'll also be the sole reason for someone else's success. December brings a cash influx. January's gift is some kind of free pass. Leo and Scorpio people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 38, 2, 31 and 16.

Sidney volleyball swept by North Platte and Ogallala

Lady Raiders struggle with first major road test, view the losses as learning experiences that will strengthen team

willkorn210@yahoo.com

In sports, they often say that you learn more from defeat than you do from victory. That saying held true when the Sidney High girls' volleyball team was swept by host North Platte and Ogallala on Thursday night.

The Lady Raiders fell to 0-2 on the season. But this season is a work in progress and the team views these matches as learning experiences. After all, North Platte is as strong a team this season as they have been in years and Ogallala is a perennial powerhouse at the class C level.

There is indeed no shame in losing to these two squads. Sidney played hard in each match and its players held their heads high.

"We felt best about our first match against North Platte," Sidney head coach Sarah Wilson said. "They are a very solid team, ran a very quick offense and didn't make very many mistakes which forced us to be honest and play back aggressively. I though the ladies did a very good job. They saw a level of play that they are aspiring toward."

Against North Platte, the Lady Raiders quickly fell behind. The Bulldogs jumped out to a 5-0 lead and looked dominating at times. Sidney did a great job of limiting huge Bulldog runs though. North Platte never scored more than five consecutive points and the Lady Raiders fought aggressively for every point. Still, the Bulldogs were just too much and took the first set, 25-9.

Sidney came out much better in the second set against North Platte. The Lady Raiders made more defensive plays and were really able to slow North Platte's attack. At one point the second set score was 10-9 in favor of the Bulldogs. Sidney fell behind again, got back within five points at 18-13, but ultimately fell in the second set, 25-14.

Senior middle blocker Savanna Rosenbaum, who finished the evening with 10 kills and three blocks, said that the team was trying to get a feel for its opponent. As it got more comfortable and familiar with the other side, Sidney gained some confidence.

"The first set was kind of that learning experience to see what we were up against," Rosenbaum said. "We were able to pull it together better in the second sets."

Sidney's second match against Ogallala proved to be the more difficult one. The Lady Raiders couldn't keep Ogallala from getting on hot streaks that at times saw them score 10 or more consecutive points.

That explained how the Indians got out to a 15-3 lead over Sidney in the first set. The Sidney players know they need to be stronger defensively and are confident that they will be.

"It's just something we all have to work on," said senior outside hitter Vanessa Riley, who allied six digs over the two matches. "It starts with us, it's not something our coach can teach us. The seniors, especially the ones who have played on varsity have to hold the team together and just work through it."

Sidney never got comfortable in the first set against the Indians, falling 25-5. But just like it did in the first match, the team played significantly better in the second set. The Lady Raiders were able to capitalize on a few Ogallala mistakes and get as close as 14-7, before falling 25-11.

In improving its overall play in the second sets of each match, Sidney displayed an impressive resiliency even in the face of being outmatched.

"That's a tribute to the girls," Wilson said. "I think when you can raise your level of play in the second set it shows you are continuing to fight and pursue and not giving up. That's something the girls can feel very good about."

Riley says she believes the team needs to focus on improving its blocking the most before it takes the court again.

"We really rely on our blocks and sometimes our blockers are put in weird situations where they can't quite get there," Riley said. "We're so used to our blockers being there and so we set our defense behind them."

Fatigue may have also been a factor for Sidney as the Ogallala match progressed.

"I felt like in the Ogallala game, our energy level dropped toward the end and it exposed our weaknesses and they (the Sidney players) are very aware of that," Wilson said. "It's a good time in the season to learn how to overcome that."

The Lady Raiders are looking forward to taking the lessons they learned in these two defeats and applying them to their season going forward. They are confident they'll be a better a team because of it.

"I think we'll respond well from this," Wilson said. "I think next week will be a good week for us on the road."

Sidney will go for its first win of the 2014 season when it faces Mitchell on the road on Tuesday.

Red Raiders set their sights on Adams Central, 2-0 start

Sidney expects tougher week two opponent in the Patriots

willkorn210@yahoo.com

The Sidney Red Raider football team couldn't have gotten off to a stronger start to the 2014 season than its 48-0 drubbing of the Chadron Cardinals last week at home.

But week two figures to be a bit tougher for the Red Raiders. They'll square off tonight against the Adams Central Patriots at Weymouth Field at 7 p.m.

Adams Central is coming off a 34-7 home whipping at the hands of Grand Island Northwest. But make no mistake – this team is significantly better than Chadron, with more impact players to account for.

Sidney head coach Todd Ekart says his team is focused solely on tonight's game and this opponent. Last week was an excellent start, but it's time for the Red Raiders to put that win behind them. Coming out slowly in this game could be costly.

"They (Adams Central) are always in the hunt for the playoffs and are well coached and physical," Ekart said.

Junior quarterback Breckon Reed will be under center for Adams Central. Last week against GINW, he threw for 169 yards and the only touchdown that the Patriots scored. He was inefficient – only completing 10 of his 29 passes in week one – but he's a gun slinger and will move the ball all over the field.

Junior running back Kyler Wormstadt is another game-changer to keep an eye on in the Patriots' attack. Like Chadron's Jackson Dickerson, Wormstadt is another explosive all-purpose back with the ability to break open a

Last week, he ran 14 times for just 37 yards, but he also totaled 106 receiving yards and a touchdown catch from Reed on just four receptions. The Patriots have a host of other backs, but Wormstadt is the runner that should most concern the Sidney defense, which was fantastic itself last week.

Ekart wants to keep his defensive approach consistent, no matter what the skills or ability of the opposition's star player.

"We just tell the kids to do their job and get as many of our guys to the ball as possible," Ekart said. "He's [Wormstadt] is a good player, but if we play with the type of relentless pursuit we did last Friday, we should be alright."

Overall, the Patriots' running game bogged down against GINW's defense with just 73 yards on 29 carries. If Sidney can repeat its overall defensive performance from the Chadron game, it shouldn't allow an excessive amount of yards on the ground.

The Red Raiders managed to limit Dickerson to a mere 37 total yards last week and if they can turn the Patriots into onedimensional offensive team, the passing game could be exposed.

When it comes to Adams Central's passing game with Reed, look for an athletic Sidney secondary--which had two interceptions against Chadron--to be active early in the game. Reed will throw the ball more than Willy Cogdill did for Chadron. He's got a big target on the outside in 6-foot, 5-inch senior receiver Ben Kiolbasa, who will be a mismatch for the smaller Sidney secondary.

Ekart and his coaching staff said they'll have their players ready to go as they aim to improve to 2-0.

"We are not resting on past success," Ekart said. "This team has a long way to go to accomplish its goals and it is very focused."

WILL KORN/SUN-TELEGRAPH

Senior running back/defensive back Michael Muggli runs to the outside at Practice earlier this week. Against Chadron last Friday, Muggli ran for 49 yards on three carries and intercepted a pass on defense.

No. 19 Nebraska hosts last FCS foe in McNeese State

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska will play an opponent from the Football Championship Subdivision for the fifth straight year when McNeese State visits on Saturday.

The 19th-ranked Cornhuskers (1-0) don't plan to host another again.

With the start of the College Football Playoff, and strength of schedule a factor in the selection process, Nebraska coach Bo Pelini supports the Big Ten's policy of avoiding games against opponents outside the Bowl Subdivision.

"When I say that, it sounds like McNeese State is not a good football team. I'm not saying that," Pelini said. "I'd just prefer to not have to deal with that. I think that scheduling will probably change for everybody across the board over the next few years."

McNeese State, which will be playing its opener, has regularly played FBS opponents. The Cowboys have won at South Florida and Middle Tennessee State the past two years, and they start 2015 at LSU.

McNeese State will earn $415,000 for playing in Lincoln, and coach Matt Viator would like to continue scheduling the big boys.

"This helps us financially, and I think it helps us competitively, too," he said. "I've always kind of taken a different approach and used it with our players as what a great opportunity this is to play in front of 87,000 people and to play a storied program like Nebraska and yada, yada, yada."

Typically, FBS teams have scheduled FCS opponents to achieve the ideal of seven home games and the millions of dollars each of those games generate. The FCS team is glad to accept the challenge, and usually a lopsided beating, to earn a paycheck that helps its athletic department make McNeese State, ranked as high as No. 6 in the FCS polls, will play a Nebraska team that amassed 784 yards while hammering Florida Atlantic 55-7 last week.

"It would be good for us if it were Nebraska's first game," Viator said. "The adage in coaching is that you should improve more from your first to second game than any other game. That's not good for us."

Things to watch in Nebraska's final prep before next week's trip to Fresno State:

ABDULLAH ON GUARD:

Ameer Abdullah, who ran for a careerhigh 232 yards last week, said he's warning his teammates to avoid complacency against the Cowboys.

"It scares me," the senior cocaptain said. "Not a lot of people are expecting them to win the game in the first place, so you can let it hang loose. You can call all your fake plays. You can fake a punt, fake a field goal. You can blitz every single player if you want. You might as well just apply everything in your playbook and try your best to get the upset of the week."

GOING DEEP: Tommy

Armstrong Jr. threw several long passes to Kenny Bell and Jordan Westerkamp last week, and Pelini plans to keep going deep.

"When it's there, Tommy throws the ball well and we have guys that can get far down the field," Pelini said. "As long as we're going to be able to run the football, we have to keep people off of us, too. If you want to load the box, you're going to have to keep our guys going down the field."

ARMSTRONG ACCURACY: Armstrong liked that he threw for a career-high 271 yards and two touchdowns with no interceptions last week. He didn't like his 52-percent accuracy (15 of 29). He said he wants to hit on better than 60 percent.

FYFE TIME? The Huskers should be able to give backup quarterback Ryker Fyfe a significant number of snaps Saturday. Fyfe took 21 in the second half against Florida Atlantic, and this week Pelini announced the sophomore had been awarded a scholarship.

MCNEESE QB QUANDRY: Tyler Bolfing has been named McNeese State's starting quarterback, but Daniel Sams and possibly Will Brisco will play, Viator said. Sams transferred from Kansas State, where he ran for INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Colts linebacker Bjoern Werner understands the mission.

He must replace Robert Mathis, the defending NFL sacks leader who is serving a four-game suspension for violating the NFL's performance-enhancing substance policy. Indianapolis opens the season Sunday night, on the road, against the Broncos.

Everyone will be watching to see if Werner and the Colts' defense can hold up against the Broncos' prolific offense.

most popular sport. Colts general manager Ryan Grigson was so impressed that he took Werner with the No. 24 pick in the 2013 draft.

The Colts then moved Werner, a college defensive end, to outside linebacker. Werner's conversion didn't go nearly as smoothly. He missed most of the preseason with a left knee injury, was slowed in October with a foot injury and wound up making only one start as a rookie, finishing with 15 tackles and 2 1/2 sacks.

When Mathis was suspended, the Colts went to a backup plan - plugging in Werner at rush linebacker. The crew includes outside linebacker Erik Walden, backup linebacker Cam Johnson, defensive end Cory Redding, inside linebacker D'Qwell Jackson and defensive lineman Arthur Jones.

"The entire defense has to step up their game and that's what they'll do," coach Chuck Pagano said.
